This grant was designed to study the molecular signaling mechanisms associated with P-glycoprotein (Pgp) trafficking at the BBB, as effected by chronic morphine and acute versus chronic pain. Our results reported Pgp-associated and neighboring proteins signal Pgp activation, via pCAV1, for Pgp trafficking. Increases in Pgp trafficking were confirmed to take place via the phosphorylation of caveolin 1. This process may well regulate Pgp trafficking from the endothelial nucleus to the lumen, where we confirmed a decrease in analgesic morphine delivery. Our recent findings also suggest Pgp trafficking events in morphine tolerant animals contribute to opioid drug escalation and challenges to opioid management.

N.I.H. R01- NS 084941. 6/2020 – 12/2024). Patrick Ronaldson, PI. Thomas P. Davis, MPI at 4.0-man months of effort each per year. Targeting Blood-Brain Barrier Transporters to Treat Ischemic Stroke. This NINDS grant focuses on beneficial effects of endogenous blood-brain barrier (BBB) transporters for delivering targeted neuroprotectants to treat ischemic stroke using a rat model of the transient middle cerebral artery occlusion (tMCAO). We propose that the neuroprotective effectiveness of statins, in stroke patients, results from transport across the BBB that is mediated by the BBB uptake transporter OATP.

N.I.H. R01- DA 051812. 2020 - 2025. Thomas P. Davis, MPI at 4.5 - man months of effort / year.

Patrick Ronaldson MPI. “Increased CNS Opioid and Ketamine exposure by an Acetaminophen - Induced Blood Brain Barrier Mechanism. This grant studies “over the counter” therapeutic acetaminophen (APAP), in drug/drug interactions of drugs of abuse (opiates and ketamine), via alterations in BBB drug-transporters Pgp and Bcrp and tight junction protein dysregulation. This APAP effect leads to drug delivery alterations of both opioids and ketamine into brain, at therapeutic human doses of APAP. Many patients abuse Tylenol which can alter drug of abuse uptake and efflux leading to toxicity. This grant application will be submitted to NIDA for competitive renewal for years 2025 to 2030 on March 6, 2025, with Dr. Davis as an MPI at 4.5 - man months effort.
